sweet Hubby in all the world! —

Just rec'd your darling big letter of Wednesday. Honey, talk about being happy! You are just wonderful! And look, once I get down, well ——— what do you think is going to happen? Do you think I am even going to stop kissing and hugging you? Honey, honey — the time is getting nearer. Only two weeks from to-morrow and I shall be in your arms. Precious, dear, will you be happy?

As to my case look, I am going to take it with me just as you did your trunk. It will save us a few dollars, and don't you think it best? Honey, look, tell me again who I shall have call for it? Was it Adams, or shall I call the people at the Wem. Station. Dear, I have already got the case and they are going to send it home for me personally to-day. This Mr. Emanuel I spoke about, sure did a lot for me. He went all over the place, and picked out the best, strongest box for the bed, dumped out its contents, had a heavy cover made to fit it, lined the floor with some thin board and wired the ends of the case. Besides this I mentioned that I would need handles on the case so he got some heavy iron handles, and had them screwed on each side of the case. Now he is going to get one of the drivers take it home for me. I sure did not know how to thank him. Now, honey, I that it best to have it go on my ticket don't you? You are a perfect dear, to want to unpack it for me, darlie, before I come, – but since it will come with me, you will help me when it does come. No you think, love that I can have it taken over to our bank Saturday sure? You see, I will want to use some of the things. I will have the man call for it on Wednesday, the day before ? leave, and ask him to ~~top~~ ~~send~~ have it on the same train I do. Is there anything else, honey love you can suggest? I will get my ticket either Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. Will let you know just when I do get it. Believe me love, I sure do begin to feel like I'm going.

Mom's heart has improved wonderfully and she says she feels much better. She slept 3 hours of her own accord last night. She is, however, extremely nervous, and that is what causes her sleeplessness the doctors say. They tell her to get everything off her mind. She worries too much, I think. You see honey, I don't see how you manage about mom's mail here. By the time you get this & answer mom may, (I hope so) be out. Best send it home, and if mom should still be here, Rose can bring it down. Mrs. Kelly promised me she would be up the afternoon to see mom, and I shall see her to-morrow. As to the flowers, I shall get some for mom – that's alright don't worry about the money. Since mom has been here, there have been 3 deaths in the ward, and this upsets mom. I wanted her to go into a private room – but she wouldn't do it. It is terrible in the ward, as poor does not sleep much. She can sit up and the nurses see her & come over & talk to her

In a private room it is certainly lonesome. However, I hope Mom will soon be discharged and, as she says, it is best to stay where she is. If Mom was not so nervous these things would not bother her. She would sleep, and forget what she saw, if she did happen to see. But on account of Papa's death these things have a tendency to upset her. But, on the whole, I am happy to say, she is much, much better.

I must close now dear. All my love kisses + thanks to the dearest baby in all the world. Give my kindest regards to all down South and tell them very soon I shall be shaking hands with them all.

Everlovingly,
Frances.
